Your work is so essential and it's so brave of all of you to go into work everyday and risk it all for the greater good. My thoughts, prayers, and gratitude goes out to all of you. Dear healthcare workers,

Thank you for putting your lives out there to help others in need. All the people who are not contained by the virus are incredibly lucky and they should express their gratitude in positive ways, such as writing a letter like this one. To many people, you are the real superheroes, not the ones we see in movies. You are the ones that are saving people. You are the ones who put your own lives at risk to save other people's lives.

Thank you so much for everything you do to help American get healthy again. You are one of the reasons that I aspire to become a doctor.

Thank you, in these times you are what we need. The whole world is thankful for all you guys are doing and believes that you are what is making this better than it could be for everyone. Once again, thank you for all you guys are doing and your efforts to help in this rough time.

I am very grateful to you all and also to the other hospitals in our area.
You have been amazing. I will never forget you!

I want to share with you the gratitude I have for you and the work you have been doing. I try to put myself in your shoes and can only imagine how tired you are at the end of your shift. I can only imagine how worried you must be about your families. The patience, the tolerance and the compassion you must have in all this. I pray for the protection of you and your loved ones as you risk your life helping others.

Thank you for everything you do. It means a lot to people.

We are so grateful for your service during this time! We know how hard you work and we appreciate all that you. Know that your selflessness and compassion makes a difference everyday. Job well done.
Sending you love and heart-felt hugs!
